WHERE NATURE MAKES LIFE WORTH LIVING

Speaking of an ideal life, there is nothing better or more independent than a life on a well regulated farm in a prosperous section of the country.

In the cities and towns we are engaged in a constant game of competition one with another, always confronted with the possibility that the commercial rise of the other fellow means our own downfall. But not so on the farm, where every man is a life and a producer and a consumer unto himself.

The farmer raises his grain, and his foodstuffs, and his hogs and cattle and chickens and eggs, and by his own efforts alone his table is supplied the year round and his surplus gives a sufficiency of those articles not produced on his own acreage. It makes no material difference to him whether his neighbor is successful or a failure, for the rapid rise of one does not necessarily imply the financial disintegration of another.

Hard times and panics may sweep over the land, strewing the path of life with the corpses of the commercial wrecks, but the farmer moves steadily onward and is the last man on earth to feel the pinch of want. His crops continue to grow and thrive, his stock fattens and becomes meat for his table, his fields and his gardens furnish him the sustenance of life, and he feels, as he is, the one man on all of this earth who is absolutely independent of all other men or combinations of men.

When the country is staggering under the weight of depression, and buying is slow and prices are down, he still has the satisfaction of knowing that his own table will be well supplied while people in cities and towns may be looking for bread for the next meal.

We hear many people deprecate a life on the farm because of the hard work and long hours it entails, but these same people seem to overlook the fact that there is no other business in life which does not require its labor and its toil and its brain racking and nerve destroying race in competition with others of its kind. And always before those engaged in commercial pursuits is the dread spectre of hard times or stragulation at the hands of a successful competitor.

Young men of today who are comfortably settled on the farm, or are just completing their education preparatory to a life career, should remain right where they are and never leave the green fields of the country. The great cities will offer them white lights, and dissipation, and debauchery, and failure in nine cases out of ten, and death will find them wishing to God they had never strayed from the comforts of the old fireside. But not so the country. It offers them a life of freedom, and manhood, and usefulness, with plenty to eat and to wear, and health, happiness and a clear conscience.

Now that the summer's work is over and the time is at hand when young men begin to long for the gaieties of city life, we suggest that you spend your idle moments in studying the latest and most improved methods of farming. Thumb over the pages of your farm journals, and the bulletins of the agricultural schools, and perfect yourself for a winning fight in extracting greater wealth from the mother earth, the source from which all wealth springs. Stick to the farm. It is the greatest spot on earth.

Let us spend the coming winter months in devising ways and means of making next summer the most prosperous one in the agricultural history of this community. There are many ways in which we may increase the output of the acreage with but little added expense, but we will have to get together and compare notes to accomplish it. Who is for expansion and greater prosperity?

Virtue still prefers a cottage, while her wayward sister is only content in a furnished flat.
